Chapter 8- Productivity and Growth

Factors in Productivity of Labor:

- Skills and training workers, education capital
- The quantity and quality of physical capital (machines, equipment, and buildings)
- The availability of land and other natural resources
- The application of the technologies applied in production
- The effectiveness of management and organization
- The social and legal environment (i.e., "Rule of the Game")

Exponents: Growth by Splitting Output in the PPF.

- The PPF is based on the assumption that resources are perfectly adaptable to the production of both goods, so the resources are specialized

Multiplier: The ratio of a specific measure of output, such as real GDP, to a specific measure of input, or the new productivity measured real GDP per hour of labor.

Output Productivity: Output per unit of input; measured as real GDP divided by the hours of labor employed to produce that output.

- Human Capital: the accumulated knowledge, skill and experience of labor
- Physical Capital: includes machines, buildings, tools, equipment, communication infrastructure, and other factors that are used to produce goods and services.
