Preventing Disease Through Healthy Environments Annette Prüss-Üstün, Jennyfer Wolf, Carlos Corvalán, Robert Bos, World Health Organization, Dr. Maria Neira, 2016 The main message emerging from this new comprehensive global assessment is that premature death and disease can be prevented through healthier environments and to a significant degree Analysing the latest data on the environment disease nexus and the devastating impact of environmental hazards and risks on global health backed up by expert opinion this report covers more than 130 diseases and injuries The analysis shows that 23% of global deaths and 26% of deaths among children under five are due to modifiable environmental factors and therefore can be prevented Stroke ischaemic heart disease diarrhoea and cancers head the list People in low income countries bear the greatest disease burden with the exception of noncommunicable diseases The report's unequivocal evidence should add impetus to coordinating global efforts to promote healthy environments often through well established cost effective interventions This analysis will inform those who want to better understand the transformational spirit of the Sustainable Development Goals agreed by Heads of State in September 2015 The results of the analysis underscore the pressing importance of stronger intersectoral action to create healthier environments that will contribute to sustainably improving the lives of millions around the world Page 4 of cover

WHO Estimates of the Global Burden of Foodborne Diseases World Health Organization, 2016-01-30 The report presents the first global and regional estimates of the burden of foodborne diseases The large disease burden from food highlights the importance of food safety particularly in Africa South East Asia and other regions Despite the data gaps and limitations of these initial estimates it is apparent that the global burden of foodborne diseases is considerable and affects individuals of all ages particularly children

Evidence-Based Public Health Ross C. Brownson, Elizabeth A. Baker, Terry L. Leet, Kathleen N. Gillespie, William R. True, 2010-12-03 There are at least three ways in which a public health program or policy may not reach stated goals for success 1 Choosing an intervention approach whose effectiveness is not established in the scientific literature 2 Selecting a potentially effective program or policy yet achieving only weak incomplete implementation or reach thereby failing to attain objectives 3 Conducting an inadequate or incorrect evaluation that results in a lack of generalizable knowledge on the effectiveness of a program or policy and 4 Paying inadequate attention to adapting an intervention to the population and context of interest To enhance evidence based practice this book addresses all four possibilities and attempts to provide practical guidance on how to choose carry out and evaluate evidence based programs and policies in public health settings It also begins to address a fifth overarching need for a highly trained public health workforce This book deals not only with finding and using scientific evidence but also with implementation and evaluation of interventions that generate new evidence on effectiveness Because all these topics are broad and require multi disciplinary skills and perspectives each chapter covers the basic issues and provides multiple examples to illustrate important concepts In addition each chapter provides links to the diverse literature and selected websites for readers wanting more detailed information An indispensable volume for professionals students and researchers in the public health sciences and preventative medicine this new and updated edition of Evidence Based Public Health aims to bridge research and evidence with policies and the practice of public health

Reducing Inequalities in Health Martijntje Bakker,Johan Mackenbach,2003-09-02 Socio economic inequalities in health are present to a greater or lesser extent in all European countries and the available data suggests that the health gap is increasing Many studies have been conducted to explain inequalities in health and from them much has been learnt about the different contributory factors However in practice it seems hard to translate the knowledge of causes into effective interventions and policies Reducing Inequalities in Health a European Perspective brings together an unrivalled collection of contemporary data on successful policies and interventions compares differences in approach in several European countries includes recent evaluation studies discusses conceptual issues for research provides examples of good and bad practice in Europe draws out the policy and research implications for the future With contributions from leading researchers in 14 different European countries this book provides a comprehensive source of reference for the reader interested in what really works in the field of health promotion and what sort of policies reduce the health gap
