

The book cover features a detailed illustration of a winged figure, possibly an angel or a personification of a mythological figure, rendered in a classical style. The figure's wings are large and feathered, with a palette of earthy browns, tans, and hints of red. The figure's body is draped in flowing, translucent fabric. The background is dark and textured, suggesting a stone wall or a cave. The overall composition is dramatic and evocative.

Preston explores the nature of cross cultural teaching learning and performance Throughout the twentieth century Japanese noh was a major creative catalyst for American and European writers dancers and composers The noh theater's stylized choreography poetic chant spectacular costumes and masks and engagement with history inspired Western artists as they reimagined new approaches to tradition and form In Learning to Kneel Preston locates noh's important influence on such canonical figures as Pound Yeats Brecht Britten and Beckett These writers learned about noh from an international cast of collaborators and Preston traces the ways in which Japanese and Western artists influenced one another Preston's critical work was profoundly shaped by her own training in noh performance technique under a professional actor in Tokyo who taught her to kneel bow chant and submit to the teachings of a conservative tradition This encounter challenged Preston's assumptions about effective teaching particularly her inclinations to emphasize Western ideas of innovation and subversion and to overlook the complex ranges of agency experienced by teachers and students It also inspired new perspectives regarding the generative relationship between Western writers and Japanese performers Pound Yeats Brecht and others are often criticized for their orientalist tendencies and misappropriation of noh but Preston's analysis and her journey reflect a more nuanced understanding of cultural exchange

The Image of the Feminine in the Poetry of W.B. Yeats and Angelos Sikelianos Anastasia Psoni, 2018-12-19 Modernism as a powerful movement saw the literary and artistic traditions as well as pure science starting to evolve radically creating a crisis even chaos in culture and society Within this chaos myth offered an ordered picture of that world employing symbolic and poetic images Both W B Yeats and Angelos Sikelianos embraced myth and symbols because they liberate imagination and raise human consciousness bringing together humans and the cosmos Being opposed to the rigidity of scientific materialism that inhibits spiritual development the two poets were waiting for a new age and a new religion expecting that they themselves would inspire their community and usher in the change In their longing for a new age archaeology was a magnetic field for Yeats and Sikelianos as it was for many writers and thinkers After Sir Arthur Evans s discovery of the Minoan Civilization where women appeared so peacefully prominent the dream of re creating a gynocentric mythology was no longer a fantasy In Yeats s and Sikelianos s gynocentric mythology the feminine figure appears in various forms and like in a drama it plays different roles Significantly a gynocentric mythology permeates the work of the two poets and this mythology is of pivotal importance in their poetry their poetics and even in their life as the intensity of their creative desire brought to them female personalities to inspire and guide them Indeed in Yeats s and Sikelianos s gynocentric mythology the image of the feminine holds a place within a historical context taking the reader into a larger social political and religious space

Moving Modernism Nell Andrew, 2020 Moving Modernism reenacts the simultaneous eruption of three spectacular revolutions the development of pictorial abstraction the first modern dance and the birth of cinema which together changed the artistic landscape of early twentieth century Europe and the future of modern art Rather than a book about dancing pictures or about pictures of dancing however this study follows the chronology of the historical avant garde to show how dance and pictures were engaged in a kindred exploration of the limits of art and perception that required the process of abstraction Recovering performances working methods and circles of aesthetic influence and reception for avant garde dance pioneers and experimental filmmakers from the turn of the century to the interwar period Moving Modernism challenges to modernism's medium specific frameworks by demonstrating the significant role played by the arts of motion in the historical avant garde's development of abstraction from the turn of the century dancer Loie Fuller who awakened in symbolist artists the possibility of prolonged or suspended vision to cubo futurist and neo symbolist artists who reached pure abstraction in tandem with the radical dance theory and performance of Valentine de Saint Point Sophie Taeuber's hybrid Dadaism between art and dance to Akarova a prolific choreographer linked to Belgian constructivism whose pioneers called her dance music architecture living geometry and pure plastics and finally to the dancing images of early cinematic abstraction from Edison and the Lumieres to Hans Richter Fernand Léger and Germaine Dulac Each chapter reveals abstraction's emergence not only as a formal strategy but as an apparatus of creation perception and reception deployed across artistic media toward shared modernist goals Focusing on abstraction's productive rather than reproductive value Andrew argues that abstraction can be worked like a muscle a medium through which habits of reception and perception are broken and art's viewers engaged by the kinaesthetic sensation to move and be moved
