Cultural Intelligence P. Christopher Earley, Soon Ang, 2003 In a global market where international teams initiatives and joint ventures are increasingly common it is extremely important for people to integrate themselves in new cultures Strategies for selecting and training people on global perspectives are critical for managing business In this book the authors develop the idea of cultural intelligence and examine its three essential facets cognition the ability to develop patterns from cultural cues motivation the desire and ability to engage others and behavior the capability to act in accordance with cognition and motivation They explore the fundamental nature of cultural intelligence and its relationship to other frameworks of intelligence Back cover

Strategic Selection Christine L. Nemacheck, 2007 The process by which presidents decide whom to nominate to fill Supreme Court vacancies is obviously of far ranging importance particularly because the vast majority of nominees are eventually confirmed But why is one individual selected from among a pool of presumably qualified candidates In Strategic Selection Presidential Nomination of Supreme Court Justices from Herbert Hoover through George W Bush Christine Nemacheck makes heavy use of presidential papers to reconstruct the politics of nominee selection from Herbert Hoover s appointment of Charles Evan Hughes in 1930 through President George W Bush nomination of Samuel Alito in 2005 Bringing to light firsthand evidence of selection politics and of the influence of political actors such as members of Congress and presidential advisors from the initial stages of formulating a short list through the president s final selection of a nominee Nemacheck constructs a theoretical framework that allows her to assess the factors impacting a president s selection process Much work on Supreme Court nominations focuses on struggles over confirmation or is heavily based on anecdotal material and posits the idiosyncratic nature of the selection process in contrast Strategic Selection points to systematic patterns in judicial selection Nemacheck argues that although presidents try to maximize their ideological preferences and minimize uncertainty about nominees conduct once they are confirmed institutional factors that change over time such as divided government and the institutionalism of the presidency shape and constrain their choices By revealing the pattern of strategic action which she argues is visible from the earliest stages of the selection process Nemacheck takes us a long way toward understanding this critically important part of our political system

Financial Intimacy Jacqueline M. Timmons, 2009-10 Addressing the common reasons people don t discuss personal finances in detail and in depth with their partner this unique approach to managing money goes beyond the superficial to the substantial and significant conversations couples should have about money In part one personal profiles of 19 women reflect the financial and emotional challenges every woman to some degree eventually faces when the relationships she has with herself her money and her mate converge The second section reviews key individual thoughts behavior and expectations concerning money and examines how these affect the expectations of a significant other The love and money dance is the focus of the third part providing a framework for asking questions and exchanging information that allow any couple to know and understand each other s personal financial history Assessing and improving the emotional impact of managing money in a romantic relationship this guidebook elevates the conversation about money and provides women with the tools to take the lead

Hua John Haiman, 1980-01-01 There is no country in the world where as many different languages are spoken as in New Guinea approximately a fifth of the languages in the world Most of these so called Papuan languages seem to be unrelated to languages spoken elsewhere The present work is the first truly comprehensive study of such a language Hua The chief typological peculiarity of Hua is the existence of a medial verb construction used to conjoin clauses in compound and complex sentences Hua also shows a fundamental morphological distinction between coordinate and subordinate medial clauses the latter are not tense iconic the events they describe are not necessarily prior to the event described in later clauses Moreover their truth is always presupposed The distribution and behaviour of a post nominal suffix mo provides insights into the nature of topics conditional clauses and functional definitions of the parts of speech In phonology the central rules of assimilation are constrained by the universal hierarchy of sonority which may however be derived from binary features These are some of the areas in which the grammar of Hua is unusually perspicuous The present work aims at a standard of completeness such that it would be a useful reference work for research in almost any theoretical topic
